Late Foreign Articles

Received at Halifax by the May Packet, in 27 days from Falmouth,

Of General Suwarrow.

London, May 10.

Wedneſday arrived the Mail from Hamburgh, by which we find that the Imperial Combined Armies continue to advance with vigour, and give no reſpite to the enemy whom they have thrown into diſorder. It is ſtated, in lettres from Verona of the 18th, that they entered Breſcia on the 17th, though the Gazette of Tueſday ſays, that the army was only to march for this purpoſe on the 19th. It is probable, however, that they would occupy this place without much oppoſition. Mirandola is likewiſe ſaid to be in the hands of the Confederates, and their patroles ſtreteh from thence as far as Pizzigithone. It is confidently aſſerted, that the head-quarters of the French have been removed from Lodi to Milan; and that in conſequence of the alarm, the Executive Directory and two Councils of the Ciſalpine Republic had withdrawn to Turin.

The main body of the Imperialiſts under Suwarrow was to endavour to bring the French to a general engagement on the 24th or 25th, and, if ſucceſsful, they expected to be maſters of all Lombardy. The Republicans muſt now fight not only for victory, but for life, for it is ſtated that the Ruſſians give no quarter. The French army, however, has received conſiderable, reinforcements, and has recovered confidence ſince the appointment of Moreau.

The inactivity which has prevailed for ſome days is owing to the late indiſpoſition of the Archduke; but ſince he has happily recovered ſome enterpriſe may be attempted worthy of the energy of his character.

OF BUONAPARTE.

While the alarms of the Republic have encountered diſaſter in Europe, ſucceſs appears to have followed the ſtandard of Buonaparte. The Vienna Court Gazette ſtates, that he had penetrated into Syria, and defeated part of their forces of the Pacha, who was employed to conduct the war againſt him. The accounts from Conſtantinople of the 3d ſtate, that the Pahca of Acre is afraid to venture from his capital; and that the French are in poſſeſſion of almoſt all Syria.

OF THE BREST FLEET.

Of the Breſt or Britiſh Fleets no ſatisfactory acconnts had reached town when our Paper went to Preſs. A ſquadron failed from Plymouth on Monday, conſiſting of the Queen Charlotte, of 110 guns, four other ſhips of the line, and two frigetes, ſaid to be to reinforce either Lord Bridport or Lord St. Vincent, as occaſion may require.

Brid Bridport was off Cape Clear on Friday laſt, at which time the French fleet had not made their appearance.

It is reported that there are 30 ſail of tranſports with the Breſt fleet. The general opinion at Breſt is, that the deſtination is Ireland, and that in a certain latitude the fleet will ſeperate into three diviſions. They expect that one may be intercepted, which ſhall ſufficiently employ Lord Bridport, to enable the others to land the troops, of which every ſhip is full.

Various reports were yeſterday in circulation reſpecting the Breſt fleet; but we can aſſure the public that nothing is aſcertained reſpecting its deſtination; and under the ignorance which too unfortunately prevails of its force and the nature of its embarkation it is at beſt but a daring conjecture to aſſign to in any preciſe object whatever. To give an implicit confidence to the French Journals, which with a pardonable artifice might be directed to miſlead us, would be the height of imprudence and credulity. There are ſome perſons, for whoſe opinion we entertain conſiderable reſpect, who are inclined to conſider Ireland as rendered invulnerable by the wiſdom and energy of the meaſures which have been adopted there by government, and the fleets appropriated to the defence of its coaſts. To others, the poſition of our naval force and the ſuperiority of our naval character, ſeem to render it incredible that the Republic ſhould expoſe her ſquadrons in the Mediterranean. There is but one quarter of the world where France, by a ſudden and unexpected ſuperiority, could hope any favourable reſult from a conflict with the Britiſh arms.

That the expedition muſt be deſtined for India; that it is only a part and continuation of their original plan of ravaging the Peninſula, and inflicting a mortal wound upon her great enemy in that great arm of her empire. After driving Admiral Rainier with his unequal force from the Streights of Babelmandel, the French armament would communicate with Tippoo Sultan by the eaſy capture of Manglaore, and extend its arms to Buonaparte through the Red Sea at Suez.

After the ſacrifices the Republic has already made to this idol of her ambition, there is no oblation too precious to be offered. Upon the altar where De Bruyes was immolated, Bruix cannot be too dear a victim; nor can Kilmaine be more ſacred than Buonaparte. It is a deſperate chance, but they have no other. It is a game of double or quits, but they have no alternative. Beſides, the Breſt fleet will revenge or ſhare the fate of its Siſter, and the forces ſave or periſh with the army of Egypt.

We have ſtated this opinion with all the candour and force we are able, in order to ſubmit it fairly to the judgement of the public. For our own part, we confeſs our Scepticiſm. It is in vain that we are referred to the gigantic projects and extraordinary character of the councils of the Republic. We have heard in theology, of belief becauſe the point is impoſſible, and we think we have ſometimes diſcovered in politics a tendency to believe, becauſe a thing is incredible.

When the advices from Lord Bridport reached the Marquis Cornwallis, a report was circulated in Dublin, that the two fleets were in ſight. This appears however to have had no foundation in truth.

French diſpatches, which have ſome relation to the object the enemy has in view, have been taken on board a ſmall veſſel from Breſt, which has been carried into Plymouth.

They were immediately forwarded by the Black Joke lugger to Lord Bridport. The nature of their contents has not tranſpired, ſo that the public are ſtill left in the ſame uncertainty reſpecting the deſtination of the enemy.

Extract of a letter from Cork, dated May 4.

A lugger arrived at Covet this morning with diſpatches from Lord Bridport, for Admiral Kingſmill, the contents of which are ſaid to be of the utmoſt importance; this lugger left the grand fleet off Cape Clear, in the moſt anxious expectation of falling in with the French.

A French lugger has been taken by Lord Bridport, with diſpatches for the traitors of this country; theſe completely develope the whole plan of the intended invaſion, and contain the names of all thoſe active citizens who were to have aſſiſted in giving up their country to republican plunder.

ADMIRAL BRUIX'S SQUADRON.

FRENCH.

Paris May 1.

The Breſt ſquadron ſet ſail the 7th Floreal (April 26.) It is commanded by Bruix, Miniſter of Marine, but its deſtination is a myſtery, which we cannot even conjecture. The Engliſh appeared on the 8th, the day after its departure, but with only 13 ſail. They remained till the 9th. We have, therefore, conſiderably the ſtart of them.

May 2.

The ſailing of our fleet from Breſt is a great event. All eyes are at this moment directed towards them. The ſtate of the ſhips of the and frigates which compoſe it, has juſt been publiſhed, with the names of thoſe who command. This liſt will inſpire the friends of glory with confidence. It is as follows:

FREDERICK-TOWN, June 5.

Extract of a letter from Colonel John Lynn, of Allegany County, to a gentleman of this town.

"During the conteſt which ſo warmly agitated our diſtrict, between the friends of the adminiſtration of our country and its opponents, it has been my fortune to hear and repeat ſeveral obſervations of General Heiſter, which many of his friends ſeem unwilling to believe, and which, he, to keep up their deluſion, I am credibly informed, has poſitively denied. On this occaſion my veracity is called in queſtion, and I feel myſelf happy that it was not done in a corner, but at the upper battalion muſter of this county laſt fall, and alſo upon other occaſions while canvaſſing the county, in the preſence of a number of reſpectable citizens, who are willing and ready to atteſt it. You may employ my name, or this letter, in any manner you think uſeful to the public on this occaſion. He advanced many arguments in defence, or palliation, of the conduct of France towards America, and particularly declared, that ſhe was juſtifiable in the capture of ninety eight out of a hundred of the veſſels ſhe had taken from us! And at one time he went ſo far as to ſay, that we had better pay the tribute demanded, than to go to war with her. Nay, ſo anxious was he to apologize for France, that he was even willing to excuſe the depredations which Great Britain had been guilty of, if he could ſhelter thoſe of Franee under her wing! He declared that Colonel Biddle, of Philadelphia, had aſſured him, that Great-Britain had not taken above five or ſix veſſels which ſhe could not juſtify, and concluded that the caſe was ſimilar, or more in favor of France now. To this I replied, though ſcarcely able to preſerve my gravity, that the Britiſh government had already acknowledged, and paid for, a great many more, although but a ſmall part of the caſes had yet been examined.—He defended the treacherous conduct of France, towards Switzerland; aſſerting, that the Cantons were only ſo many Ariſtocracies—which, in itſelf, is falſe; and, if true, would be no excuſe for her ſeizing their governments and tyrannizing over their people. He defended their inſolent treatment of our miniſters of peace, by aſſerting that Mr. Jay had continued ſix months unaccredited at the court of St. James's. In this he paid the citizens of our county a very poor compliment, in ſuppoſing them ignorant of what is ſo notorious, that Mr. Jay, though employed a conſiderable time in negociating the treaty, was, immediately, on his arrival, received with reſpect, attention, and at leaſt apparent cordiality. When called upon for proof of ſo extraordinary an aſſertion, he ſaid that his author was a Mr. Calhoon, merchant, in Philadelphia, who had it from a merchant of London, who had heard it ſaid at a dinner in London, where a number of Britiſh merchants were preſent.

"Moſt of theſe facts, if he ſhould deny them, and my own word is not ſufficient, I can ſubſtantiate by undeceivable teſtimony; and I confeſs to you that in my judgment, a man holding ſuch ſentiments, is utterly unworthy of the confidence of Americans."

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 2.

MR. FENNO,

THE public having been called on ſeveral times, lately, to contribute in charity, to the ſufferers by the late fires at New York, at Baltimore, and in this city; the great inequality of this mode of taxation, has led me to requeſt you will publiſh a remedy for the defect.

As it is now well known, that there are public offices ſufficient to Inſure all the goods and other property of the United States liable to deſtruction by fire; ſurely every independant Citizen would prefer to call on them for his right, than to truſt to begging for indemnity in any caſe of loſs.

Let it then, henceforth, be held diſreputable for any man, whoſe ſituation may require ſuch indemnity, to remain a day, an hour, un-inſured; this is the caſe in Europe, where no man is deemed truſt-worthy, who would riſk more than his all, by neglecting to Inſure the property in his poſſeſſion; and as this is already underſtood in this country, as far as reſpects ſhipping, ſo ought it to be where ever we are endangered from fire.

I. R.

Buonaparte to the ſwarms of Arabs.

"What is your ſubſtance, whereof are you made,
"That millions of ſtrange ſhadows on you tend?
"Since every one hath, every one, one ſhade,
"And you, but one, can every ſhadow lend."

The Life of Man.

Like as the waves make toward the pebbled ſhore,
So do our minutes haſten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In ſequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipſes 'gainſt his glory fight,
And time that gave, doth now this gift confound.
Time doth tranſfix the flouriſh ſet on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing ſtands but for his ſcythe to mow.

[Shakeſpeare.]

A fairer proſpect for the honeſt men of all countries, than that which preſents itſelf at the preſent moment, has not dawned upon the world, for a long, long ſeries of years. There is a natural propenſity in the mind, to eſtimate any acquiſition by the toils endured, or the evils encountered in obtaining it; and perhaps there is not another quality which tends in an higher degree to the complacency and comfort of our own weak and irritable being. In this view, a ſource of conſolation is opened to us, inexhauſtible and boundleſs; and, in this view, the promiſe that lies before us is ineſtimable.

Although the evils of human life be coeval with its duration, yet it can not be ſo with regard to its miſeries: earthquake, famine, peſtilence and revolution, are not ſempiternal: like comets they have their periods, and like them, too, they are eccentrick. Ten years inceſſantly occupied in ſcenes of injuſtice and oppreſſion, rapine, violation and murder, have commonly ſufficed for two or three centuries. We have beſides in the preſent inſtance, a more ſatisfactory aſſurance than precedent affords, that our afflictions are ſoon to have an end. The purpoſe for which it is probable mankind have been ſo extenſively viſited with revolutions, it is eaſy to diſcern, has been very extenſively and very completely anſwered. Men begin to deſire peace and quietneſs, and hanker no longer after the liberty or the republicaniſm of France, contented with their own: That ſpecies of liberty, that mockery of reaſon, is paſſing away, and better days are haſtening on. The trying hour is paſt in Europe, and the minds of good men are releaſed at laſt from the rack of apprehenſion. So might it have been with us, had the voice of the country been more loudly and boldly ſpoken. Our grounds of hope are, however, ſtronger, than heretofore, and our means of ſelf-preſervation more powerful and connected than we have ever yet ſeen them.

Boſton, June 25,

Mr. Joſeph Mackaneer, mate of the brig Three Siſters, capt. Savage, of Wiſcaſſet, who was left at Cape Francois, as a hoſtage for the payment of 4000 dollars, for the liberation of the veſſel and cargo, effected his eſcape the day he was to have been ſent to France, and has arrived here.

Arrived—ſhip Neutrality, Baker, from Halifax, 6 days. She was from Batavia, and carried in there on ſuſpicion of having French property on board.

On Saturday arrived at Glouceſter, ſchr. Sally, Knowles, Liſbon, 28 days.

On the 10th May, 4 French privateers failed from St. Sebaſtians, mounting from 18 to 22 guns—bound on a cruiſe to the northward and weſtward of the Weſtern iſlands, from 42, to 45, N. lat.

New-York, July 1,

[By the ſeveral arrivals yeſterday.]

The ſloop John, Enoch Lee, from Martinique, by way of St. Kitts and St. Thomas, in 12 days.

Sailed from St. Pieres, May 30th, in company with a number of American veſſels under convoy of an Engliſh frigate for St. Kitts; 2d June arrived at St. Kitts, came to anchor to wait for an American convoy, which I was told by the American agent would ſail in a few days; I waited until the 15th, when I got under way, with about 30 ſail of American and Engliſh veſſels, under convoy of the Baltimore, Richmond and Eagle, American ſhips of war; we were joined by 10 ſail of Americans from St. Bartholomews; on the 15th touched at St. Thomas, for the veſſels waiting for convoy: there was joined by a number more in all amounting to 48 ſail—19th got under way for America. I kept with the convoy until the 25th, when I left them: the Baltimore's boat came on board with a packet for New-York; I muſt not forget to mention that captain Barron, of the Baltimore, paid every attention that was poſſible to the veſſels under his convoy; while lying at St. Kitts waiting for a convoy, came in the Norfolk brig, capt. Bainbridge, with both topmaſts gone, carried away in chaſe of a French lugger of 14 guns, by which accident ſhe could not have the pleaſure to convoy her in.

A few days after came in the Baltimore, and Eagle, with a French ſchooner with 4 carriage guns and 35 men, a prize to them; likewiſe a French cartel with Engliſh and American priſoners; three of the laſt American captains that was carried into Guadaloupe told me they were treated very well, had all their clothes and money given them and their expences paid, while on ſhore waiting for the cartel; was not impriſoned as others had been before.

The brig Little George, captain M'Griffin, arrived yeſterday in 22 days from Trinidada, was boarded by the ſloop of war Lark, who preſſed one man out of her. Spoke a ſchooner from Jamaica bound to Norfolk, name unknown.

The brig Lark, capt. Wayſay, from Tortola, arrived yeſterday in 13 days. Sailed in company with 40 ſail of Americans under convoy of two Engliſh frigates.

The ſchooner Two Siſters arrived yeſterday from St. Thomas in 12 days, ſpoke a ſhip from Surinam bound to Baltimore.

The ſchooner Ann, Watterman, arrived yeſterday from St. Mary's in 10 days, ſpoke a ſchooner from Providence to Baltimore.

The brig Two Brothers, capt. Hain, arrived yeſterday in 6 days from Charleſton, with the following paſſengers. General M'Pherſon, William Price, eſquire, and his family.

Yeſterday arrived the ſloop Cornelia, capt. Culver, in 12 days from St. Thomas. June 9th, left at Martinique 20 odd ſail of American veſſels waiting for convoy; this day ſailed in company with the Engliſh ſhip Satisfaction, of 20 guns and 50 men, bound to St. Bartholemews; the 10th left the ſhip under Montſerat; the eleventh came to anchor at St. Kitts-found the following armed veſſels belonging to the United States: the ſhip Ganges, ditto, Richmond and Norfolk; the latter had loſt both top maſts, in chace of a French privateer of 18 guns, and three hundred men; refitted and out on a cruiſe. Alſo the ſhip Ganges; the Baltimore had taken a French privateer ſchooner of 4 guns and thirty men. June 14 weighed and ſailed in company with the Baltimore and Eagle, off Nevis; met the Richmond with the St. Bartholomews veſſels, which joined fleet, except the brig Fair American that was bound to the bay of Honduras; the 16th they anchored out ſide of the harbour of St. Thomas; the fleet conſiſting of 40 ſail. June 21, lat. 24, parted with the fleet.

The French privateers are numerous, as many as 8 ſail of Americans had lately been taken and carried into Guadaloupe; they had taken and Engliſh cutter cloſe to Diamond Rock, Martinique.
